Biographical Note

LaVerne Harrell Clark was born in Smithville, Texas. From 1962 to 1966, she directed the University of Arizona Poetry Center. She started the tradition of taking photos of writers when they visited the Poetry Center, and would also seek out writers to photograph on other occasions, such as at literary festivals and academic conferences. Clark published two companion books that document many of her photographs: The Face of Poetry: 101 Poets of the 60's and 70's (1976) and Focus 101: An Illustrated Biography (1979). Clark was also a noted folklorist. In 1966, she published They Sang for Horses: The Impact of the Horse on Navajo & Apache Folklore. She also wrote fiction set in her native Texas, Keepers of the Earth (1997). After her death in 2008, her house in Smithville was donated to the writer-in-residence program at Texas State University-San Marcos.

Scope and Content Note

This collection contains photographs, negatives, and correspondence related to the early history of the University of Arizona Poetry Center and its Visiting Poets and Writers Reading Series. The records also show the evolution of Clark's writing and photography career. In addition, Tucson emerges as a location that connects writers and inspires their future work.

The collection is notable in preserving informal portraits of writers like Tess Gallagher, Jeremy Ingalls, Alison Deming, and Robert Bly. Clark's correspondence with writers also reveals information on how they perceived their work and images of themselves.

Organization

The collection is organized into seven series:

Series I: Correspondence, Photo Notes

Series II: Photographs

Series III: Negatives

Series IV: Single Best-Choice Negatives

Series V: The Face of Poetry and Focus 101 Negatives

Series VI: The Face of Poetry and Focus 101 Book Maquettes
